Early Voting for the December 9 Joint Runoff Election Ends Tuesday Voter data shows that the average age of a Runoff voter trends older

(Houston, TX) – Harris County Clerk Teneshia Hudspeth reports that 90,918 individuals voted early as of Sunday. Clerk Hudspeth urges qualified Houston, Baytown, and Bellaire registered voters to take advantage of the last two days of the early voting period for the December 9 Joint Runoff Election. There are 41 voting centers open today and tomorrow from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. across the greater Houston area.

“An analysis conducted at the end of last week of the City of Houston early voting roster shows that the average age of the in-person early voters is about 62 years old,” said Clerk Hudspeth. “That will fluctuate a bit once all ballots are cast for this election. Still, the average age of the voters is a little older than in the most recent Houston Runoff Elections and significantly older than the average age of the registered voter population, which is 47.”

Registered voters in Houston, Baytown Council District 4, and Bellaire may review their sample ballot, get vote center location information, and wait times at www.HarrisVotes.com.
